

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A protective hood, particularly for automobiles, machines and the like, comprised of a composite material with a support material of nonwoven polypropylene and a coating material of a thermoplastic copolymer. According to the invention, the coating material is comprised of an ethylene-butyl acrylate copolymer and is introduced onto the support material by means of extrusion coating.